Curator Statement

In him was life, and the life was the light of men. The light shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it...And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we have seen his glory, glory as of the only Son from the Father, full of grace and truth.

- John 1: 4-5, 14

As we journey beyond Christmas into Epiphany and the celebration of Jesus' life and ministry, six new works by Jim Janknegt are now on view. In these images of Christ's childhood and adult life, we continue to enjoy Jim's approach to figures and settings, as it facilitates our imagination and wonderings about the biblical stories represented.

Flowing chronologically from the nativity, The Presentation is next. Immediately, we notice the high contrast of Christ illuminated in the darkness, even physically showing Jesus as the light of the world. The near symmetry of the painting emphasizes the significance of Jesus' introduction to his family, community, and, symbolically, everyone in the world. Look closely for the small and significant symbolism farther back - at the place of the altar, we see a lamb and a (good) shepherd raising his arms in the air, foreshadowing Christ's final act.

In Feeding the 5000, the figure representing Jesus is surprisingly, but fittingly, gigantic compared to the other people. Larger than life? He is LIFE. Also, dressed in more modern clothing, and, strikingly, in red and blue, he is not only reminiscent of Superman, he is THE superman. The details among the other figures and their specific actions illustrate a familiar story, while the size difference between the figure of Jesus and the others reminds us that Jesus is preeminent and full of goodness: The Lord provides; the Lord is present and knows our needs; the Lord is over all.

In Calming the Storm, we again see Jesus' large physical stature compared to the situation - nature, the storm, and the fear of the men are all dwarfed in comparison to Christ's dominion, aid, and provision. In this painting we are allowed to better see what we long for: God's care, involvement, and ever-present help. God is above all, both allowing and intervening to show us himself and give us what we need, in all storms.
