Leaving A Legacy

Get To Know You Question:

If animals could talk, which one would be the rudest?

Let's Dig Deeper

Someone read Psalms 145:4. Spend some time and share some key words that spoke out to you while reading. What is it about those words that spoke to you?

Living Stones

1. What does it mean for you personally to be a “living stone” instead of a “standing stone”? How is your life telling the story of God’s faithfulness right now?
2. If someone only observed your actions (not your words), what story would they believe about who God is from your life?

Be Rooted

3. Are you more “planted” or “potted” in your faith and church community? What does that look like in practice?
4. What storms or droughts in life have tested your roots, and how did you respond?
5. What would change in your life and legacy if you decided to fully “plant yourself” this year?

Grow

6. Are you closer to Jesus today than you were six months ago? What’s helping—or hindering—that growth?
7. Who is growing because of your influence right now? Who are you intentionally discipling or investing in?
8. What is one area of spiritual maturity you know God is calling you to pursue more seriously?

Give

9. How do you view your giving financially to the church: as an obligation, an investment, or an act of worship? Why?
10. What's one way your life has been changed because of someone else's giving?
11. When you think about the legacy you're leaving, how is your generosity today shaping what others will experience tomorrow?

Serve

12. When people "taste the fruit" of your life, what do they experience?
13. What unseen acts of service (behind the scenes) have impacted you most, and why do they matter so deeply?
14. Where is God nudging you to move from attending to contributing?
15. How would your life and church change if every believer fully embraced a servant's heart?

Legacy

16. If Living Stones Church became a true generational church, what would that look like for you personally? And what are you willing to do to make it happen?

Close in Prayer.
