As we study the women of the Bible, we enter stories marked by faith, courage, struggle, and obedience. These women lived with purpose in their God-given seasons, and their choices continue to speak into our lives today. We reflect on their journeys, we recognize our own stories and honor the women who have shaped our faith.

We celebrate both the women of Scripture and the women who have poured into us, and we commit to carrying their faith forward into the next generation.

- What resonates with you most about this woman's story, and how does it speak to your current season of faith?
- How does her experience inspire your own faith journey? What encouragement or challenge do you take from her life?
- What practical lessons can we apply today from her choices, character, or relationship with God?
- What is one key lesson from this woman that has impacted—or could impact—how you trust, obey, or walk with God?
- What does it mean to celebrate women's contributions to faith, both in Scripture and in our lives today?
- You are living out something another woman invested in you. Who has influenced your faith, and how do you see her legacy shaping who you are today?
- In what ways do the women we study—and the women you know—reflect parts of your own identity as a woman of faith?

These women remind us that God works through faithful hearts, flawed lives, courageous obedience, and quiet service. Every woman's story—including yours—matters deeply to God.
