THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

The challenge for any believer is to figure out the balance between living in this world while representing another. For the Christ follower, there is a dual citizenship of sorts. First, we live and breath and function in the physical world. Then, there is the Kingdom of God that we are to represent while doing so. Clearly, these two worlds collide. They have different agendas, different goals, and seek different outcomes.

“Here is the question that we must answer: How do I represent God, as I should, while living in a world with a very different agenda?”

accept as reality and move on. There are other things that we must take a stand against in order to represent the Kingdom.

As Christians we must be very sensitive to the Holy Spirit. If we raise a fuss about everything we do not like, people will soon dismiss us as angry and illogical. However, if we just accept all kinds of ungodliness, then we are not doing what God has called us to do. How are we to know the difference?

For me, the answer lies in pursuing the things that will have the greatest impact. While I certainly believe Christians should be involved in politics, societal issues, and the law-making process – it is not these things that will produce the greatest good. The greatest amount of energy that I spend ought to be focused on prayer and the gospel. As more and more people come to know and follow Christ, a number of moral issues will resolve. The reality is, we cannot legislate morality. Only a heart changed by Jesus Christ will make a real shift.

Honored to be your pastor,
