THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

Proverbs 31 speaks of the character of a virtuous woman. In verse 28 we are told that, “Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praises her.” Today, we celebrate mothers. In our own way, we arise to call you blessed. We know that we would not be the people we are today without our mothers there to shape and mold, correct and encourage, and to push us beyond our own comfort zones.

We know that being a mom cannot be easy. There are the sleepless nights, the endless sacrifices, and the constant putting others before yourself. It may seem at times that we do not notice, but we do. So, on this day, we pray that you know how much you are appreciated.

To the young mom who is wondering if she will ever sleep through the night again, hang in there. It may seem like this season will never end, but it will. It won’t be long and you will be standing in front of a college dormitory, hugging your child as you get ready to leave, and you will not believe how fast time has gone. Cherish every moment.

To the mom of a teen who wonders if they are hearing a single thing that you are saying to them, they are. The process of stepping into adulthood and establishing one’s own freedom can be difficult, but its natural. The teen years are an awkward in-between phase. They are not yet an adult, but they are no longer a child. Relax, it will work out.

To the parent who prays for the adult child, keep it up. Maybe they are not walking as closely to the Lord as you had wished, or maybe not at all. Maybe they are not living the life you hoped, but all is not lost. It seems that at a time we least expect it, God gets their attention, and they come running back to Him. When it seems all is lost, it is not. Keep praying.

For those whose children are walking with the Lord and doing well, do not take it for granted. Thank God daily for the choices they have made. Pray that they will continue to pursue God in all their endeavors. It is always too soon to stop praying. They need your prayers, especially in this day.

To all the moms, I pray this day is a special one for you.

Honored to be your pastor,
