THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

Today, we conclude our series, “At War: Not Against Flesh and Blood.” I hope you have found this series helpful as we think about how we, as followers of Christ, ought

“If you feel like everyday is a battle, surrender. We do not surrender to sin, but to the will of God for our lives. We do not have to fight, He will do the fighting for us.”

how to put on the full armor of God through prayer, and today – how we are to relate to outsiders. God has redeemed us for a specific purpose. That purpose is not to battle and war with everyone around us. Instead, He has called us to walk in peace and to be a demonstration of what it means to walk in the peace of His sovereignty.

If you have allowed Satan and this world to blur your vision, take some time to recalibrate. If you find yourself frenzied and worried, take time to lean into God. If you feel like everyday is a battle, surrender. We do not surrender to sin, but to the will of God for our lives. We do not have to fight, He will do the fighting for us.

Again, I hope this series has provided some insight, some peace, and a little rest for your soul. Remember, when Christ died on the cross and then walked out of the grave, He won the victory for us – for all time. The battle has been won. We simply wait in eager expectation to experience the full victory that is ours. Rest in that.

Honored to be your pastor,

to relate to the world. It is easy to slip into a defensive, combative posture, but that is not what God has called us to. Instead, as we have seen, the real battles are fought in prayer. We should not see those around us as the enemy. If they have given themselves over to sin, they are Prisoners of War, not our adversary.

I hope that the word of God has convinced you, as we have talked about being Salt and Light, how we are to relate to the government,
