THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

Last year on Memorial Day weekend, my family and I began what we called “The Summer Tour.” Several churches within our association had called to have me come and fill the pulpit while they assembled committees to seek their next pastor. What started as one or two Sundays at a church, quickly turned into, “Can you come and preach for us for a month?” and what started as the summer tour progressed into the fall, winter, and spring tours. I’ve been witness to God moving and working in these churches and have had the honor to pray with, over, and for some fine folks that yearn for God’s intervention in their lives and in their churches.

“I think we must realize that there are far more people in our communities than we think, who have not heard the gospel, and it should be breaking our hearts.”

It has been truly a blessing to serve these churches and they all have been so welcoming to me and my family. My daughter, Kamryn, has adoptive grandparents at every church we’ve been to seemingly. She’s even an honorary choir member at a couple.

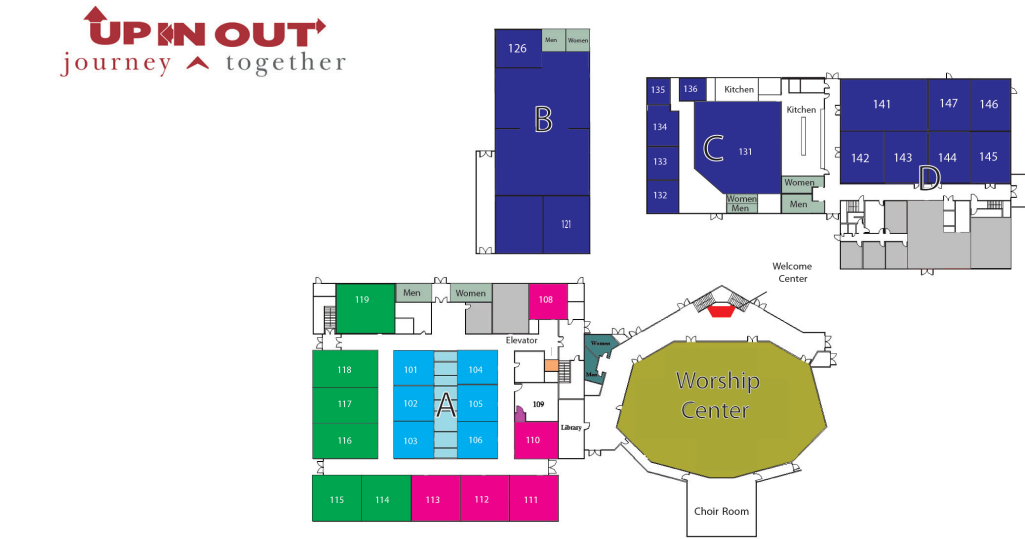

Even during these blessings, of the 7+ churches that I’ve served, there is one thing that is common among them all. One thing to me is concerning and worthy of much prayer. That is that most of these churches, on “a good Sunday” are half full. I believe that the main reason we’re seeing lower attendance at church is that Christians are not fulfilling the great Commission. I think we must realize that there are far more people in our communities than we think, who have not heard the gospel, and it should be breaking our hearts.

So what can you do? The best thing for you to do is to pray and seek God’s guidance on where He would have you to make an impact. Pray for our sister churches in the area that are struggling not only to find leadership, but even just to stay open. They desperately need our collective prayers.

Over the past year, Nanda and I have only been able to attend Sunday morning services here a half dozen or so times. We’ve even contemplated filling out visitor cards. I cannot thank you enough for the many prayers for us and your support. While we know we are serving God, we also know that we represent Northside Baptist Church wherever we serve. I hope we’ve done both well.

Blessings,
Marlon Vick
PS- Pray for me this morning, I’ve never preached this service before!
