THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

What does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God? Micah 6:8

Early in my Christian walk, I found this scripture, and later when I saw these same beautiful words adorning a huge archway as I entered the sanctuary of a church I was visiting, it simply confirmed to me that others love this verse the same way that I do. These words seemed to address my question of “What’s next in God’s plan for me?” This verse simply describes what God wants from us in return for all He has done for us. God sent His Son to the cross to pay the penalty for our sins, and He has drawn us to Himself. He has forgiven our sins and by sending His Holy Spirit to dwell within us, we are now able to love as He loves. For myself, I find that if I direct my life according to those three ancient signposts, the remaining details of my life will tend to fall into place.

I am the 7th child in a family of 13 kids. God blessed me with strong Christian parents, and by their example, instilled in me at an early age the desire to help others, especially the downtrodden. For those who know me personally, they know my heart breaks for the homeless and hurting people that God puts in our path.

For myself, I feel this verse sums up living a Christian life. To do justice means you treat people fairly. To love mercy is to express kindness or love to others through our actions. It means having compassion for those in need, especially the downtrodden. To walk humbly with our God means you let God guide you. We rely on God as “our help and our shield.” (Psalm 33:20). I try to live up to these words in my daily walk.

It seems like we are living in the same times as Micah. Government bureaucracies have grown greedy and indulgent. Civil and religious leaders have neglected doing what they should and persisted in doing what they should not...idolatry is pervasive.

God wants a commitment to faithful living. For myself, Micah 6:8 connects my faith with my actions, and how I care for those in need with my walk with God.
