THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

Two weeks ago, Diane and I were in San Antonio for two reasons: One celebratory and fun, and the other was rather somber and sad. In the mix of the emotions of the weekend we were shown examples of God’s love in tangible ways.

Diane attended her 40th high school reunion Saturday night and was greeted by former classmates who now value relationships over popularity as they remembered days gone by. At the end of the evening, Diane and I were pulled to the lobby by one of these longtime friends who had crafted the most wonderful quilts for each of us, to show us love as we completed the journey of laying her mom to rest. We were overwhelmed at this gesture of love (quilts are quite time intensive), and every stitch represented a moment of love for us. The quilt gifted to Diane was so beautiful that we asked if we could lay it across Diane’s moms’ casket on Monday (and we did) to show our love to her. So, one gift in love was shared in another moment with someone we love. We will always cherish that quilt, but more importantly, the hands that showed us Christ’s love..

Also, on Monday, our family was blessed with a delicious homemade meal at the home of Dru’s longtime friends, the Brakes. As we devoured the deliciously deviled eggs and a tasty charcutier board of cheese and grapes, we remembered with laughter good times together at a former church and mission trips together. We sang around the piano old familiar hymns and songs that brought us comfort. For our family, who had traveled from all over the US to be there, we had a moment of love expressed in a tangible way to meet us at the moment of our need. We were in the midst of the body of Christ and the “love one anothers” at that moment.

As we begin this new series, we’re going to learn about the “One Others” and I hope you’ll share your experiences each week that show these life giving principles lived out among your family and friends. They are all around you. You just have to look for them.

Diane and I are so blessed to be grafted into the Northside family. Your calls, texts and prayers have truly sustained us in one of those life moments where you become the living parent and savor the moments you had with your earthly parents. We love and appreciate each of you.
