This sermon on Matthew 6:1–4 teaches that while Jesus assumes His followers will give to those in need, what matters most is the motive behind the giving. Humans naturally desire validation and promotion, but Christ calls His disciples to trust God—not people—with their honor and reward. Almsgiving is an act of love rooted in Scripture, yet Jesus warns against giving in order to be seen, praised, or even to inflate one’s own ego. True righteousness gives quietly and secretly, for God’s eyes alone, confident that He sees every hidden act and will reward openly—both in earthly provision and eternal treasure. The sermon encourages believers to practice generous compassion, keep their giving private, refuse to use generosity as leverage for influence, and seek their validation and promotion solely from God, who honors those who humbly trust Him.
