

Freebie Fridays!

Check back for at least two freebies a month! Old freebies will be taken down as new ones are added!

Stop and think about the best way to them how their words made you

Don't bother including certain classmates in your activities if you don't get along with them.

Run away and don't talk to them again.

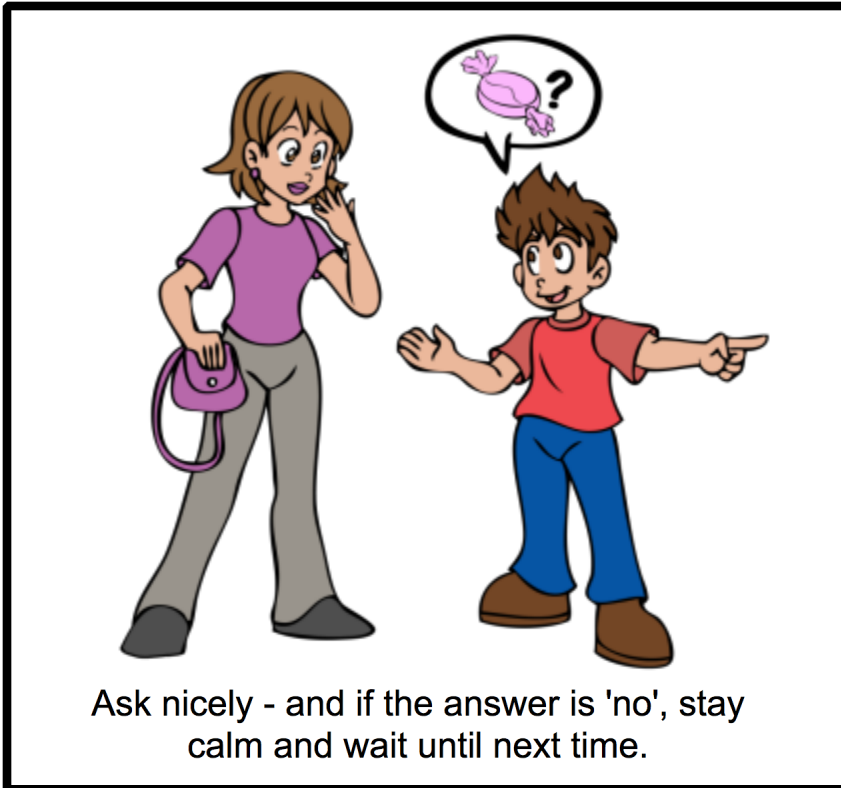

Make an effort to include everyone who wants to join in a game or activity.

Asking for something you want:

Which is the best choice?

Even when we know what the best choice is, we don't always make it. Why? What might stop us from making a good choice in this situation?

What strategies can you use to make a good choice in this situation, even when it's hard?

Cooperating With Others:

Be tough and mean, so that others will be scared into doing what you want.

"Be a friend to make a friend". Help others and expect that they will help you in return.

Taking Care Of Your Things:

Be careful with your things and keep them clean so that they will last a long time.

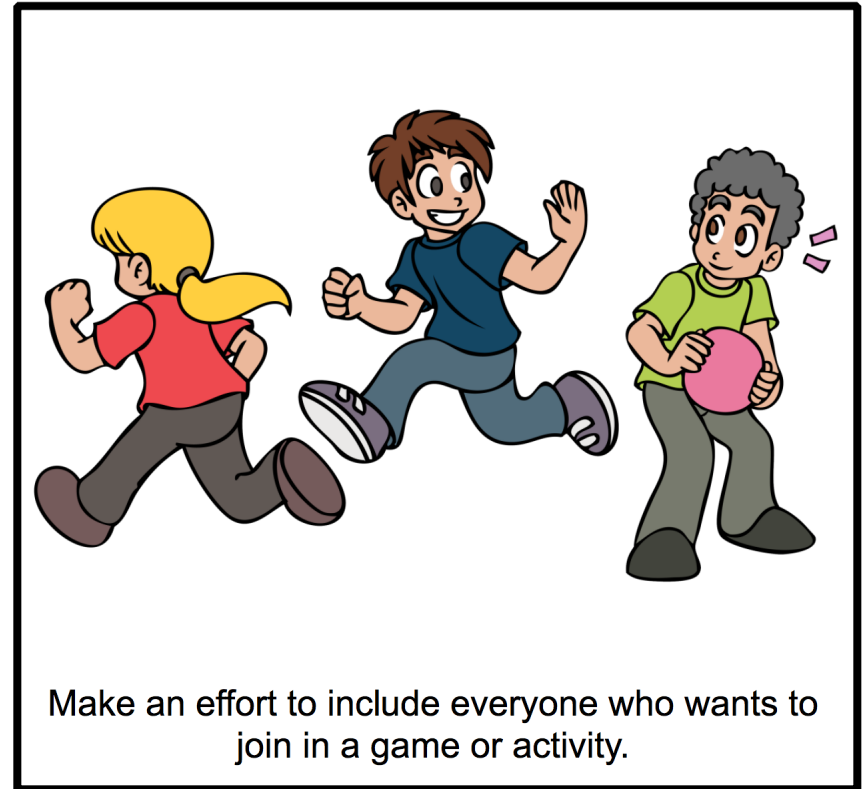

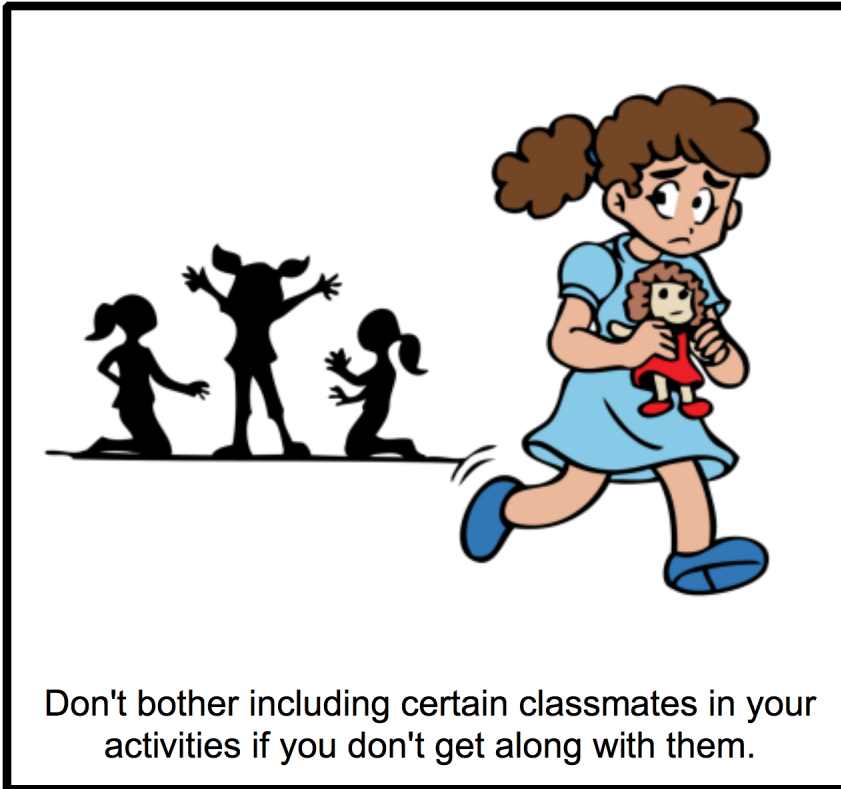

If something on the floor is in your way, just kick it out of the way, and ask for a new one if it breaks.

If You See Someone Having Difficulty:

Laugh about it, they'll probably think it's funny.

Do what you can to help them, the way you would want others to help you in the same situation.

Someone Is Talking & You Are Bored:

Listen and wait for your turn to speak. You want them to listen when you talk, after all.

Sigh, look around the room, and make a face to let them know how bored you are.

If Someone Accidentally Hurts Your Feelings:

Run away and don't talk to them again.

Stop and think about the best way to explain to them how their words made you feel.
