Don’t Be Scammed

Know what’s happening: Scammers are getting more resourceful and convincing every day

The 'great sale on your favorite brand' scam
Scammers create ads on social media offering merchandise at great prices and set up bogus websites that all look exactly like genuine retailers. They'll collect personal information or ask you to pay with a digital payment platform like Zelle®

Watch out for the latest tech support and computer virus scams

Scammers pretend to be tech support from a well-known company. They either call, text or try to trick you into clicking on a link in an email, text or pop-up window, claiming there's a problem with your computer like a virus or a billing issue. To fix it, you inadvertently give them remote access to your computer.

Checks you write

Scammers can steal checks from mailboxes or ones not properly destroyed after being deposited. They can then use chemicals to erase and rewrite the checks to themselves or may use your personal information, like name, address or account number, to sell your info or create counterfeit checks.

Watch out for charity scams

Scammers come out of the woodwork to prey on people who are looking to help relief efforts when disaster strikes. Charity scams can appear as fraudulent websites, phishing emails, text messages, crowdfunding sites, phone calls, and postal mail. Being informed is key to protecting your donations.

Scams can happen to anyone

Watch how scammers are using technology to target younger people.

Keep tabs on common scams. To help protect yourself, always be suspicious of calls, emails, texts or any communication you receive from someone you don't know — particularly if they want money or your personal information.

Remember:

Suspicious messages may have typos or grammatical mistakes. Don't click on links or attachments in an email if you're not sure who it's from.

You may want to report suspicious calls, emails, and text messages by visiting, <https://ReportFraud.ftc.gov>.

Pick up a handout in the foyer for more detailed information on how to prevent being scammed.

Being a good steward in the Bible means being a faithful manager of the resources God has entrusted to you, which includes using your gifts, time, and possessions wisely for His glory. Read Luke 12:42-48: This parable highlights the qualities of a faithful and wise steward who is put in charge of the household. It emphasizes being responsible, trustworthy, and acting on the Master's will.
