From Your Interim Pastor

"If I had it to do over, I would _____ (fill in the blank)."

Most of us use the phrase more than once in life. We utter it in regard to parenting, work, relationships, health, church, belief systems, and even God. The phrase expresses our longing for a chance to go back in time and correct past mistakes.

The longer we live, the more we accumulate such regrets. Sometimes, they overwhelm us. We feel trapped by the consequences of such past decisions. When this happens, we tend to shy away from making significant decisions, lest we again make a mistake.

Jesus Christ offers us a different option. He calls us to acknowledge our mistakes, learn from them, and start over with him as our guide. Doing so requires humility, honesty, a bit of courage, and measuring decisions by the standard of Jesus.

To be honest, we'll still make mistakes, but it's less likely they will paralyze us. Instead, we'll become apt to recognize our errors sooner, admit them, do what we can to correct them in light of Jesus' guidance, and keep moving into the future God envisions for us.
